SHELACH-LECHA God asks Moses to send one man from each tribe to scout the Promised Land and its inhabitants. After 40 days, the spies return with luscious fruit -- and two different interpretations of what they saw. Ten spies say that the people in Canaan cannot be defeated; Joshua and Caleb insist otherwise. The Israelites panic, demanding to return to Egypt. Moses talks God out of destroying every Israelite other than him, but God insists that this generation (other than Joshua and Caleb) would not reach the Promised Land, instead they would wander the wilderness for 40 years. The 10 negative spies are killed by a plague, and the Israelites who attempt a preemptive invasion of Canaan are routed. Several laws conclude the portion: Various offerings must be accompanied by flour, oil and/or wine. Those who break commandments accidentally can atone via sacrifice, whereas intentional transgression is punished more harshly. A man gathering wood on the Sabbath is publicly stoned to death. The Israelites are required to wear fringes in order to remember the commandments.
